The Coming Virginia Election. So far as we know there is no purpose on the part of anybody to quibble about he meaning of the words "may" and shall" in those sections of the Walton w prescribing the duties of the special

It seems to us that if those of our peowork smoothly and satisfactorily.

We are sure that the law will work well if the officers who have to conduct e November election will but take the mins to learn the law's provisions in dvance. Any officer who delays reading he law until the day of election is likely to find that he makes a bungle of his business. Its provisions are simple enough, but they are new to Virginians generally, and for this reason we have frequently urged election officers to go to studying the law now. Especially should the special constable inform himself, because his duties are important, his position is a responsible one, and it fails to execute the plain provisions of the law after all this warning he will be held justly blamable.

Yes, we say again, that it is our wishas it is our belief and expectation-that the new election law shall be carried out in every county and city in this State according to its true intent and meaning. If so carried out each special constable will consider that it is his sworn duty to assist every illiterate and physicallydisabled voter who applies to him for help. In other words, "may," in the much-talked-of section should be construed to mean "shall."

Not only are our people to vote for members of the United States House of Representatives on the 6th of November, but they are also privileged to vote FOR or AGAINST an amendment to the State Constitution. This amendment, if adopted, will probably save the public treasury $60,000 per annum, inasmuch as it will enable our General Assembly to pass laws allowing certain petty cases to be tried without the intervention and cost of a jury; that is to say, the people will vote (as we predict) that our court procedure in petty cases may be restored before our Supreme Court of Appeals gave its decision in the Mary Miller case.

There will be a separate ballot and a separate ballot-box for taking the vote on the constitutional amendment. The law is not as clear as it should have been as to how this vote must be taken, but in the opinion of those well qualified to judge the separate ballot will meet every demand of the law, and will ascertain with unquestionable accuracy the sense of the voters on this important question.

stable is authorized to give an illiterate or disabled voter, Judge Simmons, in deciding the Buchanan election case, said;

If the voter is totally blind, the con-stable shall prepare said ballot for said elector, in accordance with the instruc-tions of said elector. This is the only kind of voter for whom the constable can or shall prepare a ballot, in accord-ance with instructions of the voter. If the voter can see and has the physical ability to strike out the name pointed out by the constable, he (the voter) must strike out, and not the constable. If the constable prepares the ballot for any voter, and assists him who can read and write and has eyesight and the use of his hands sufficient to enable the voter to prepare his own vote, he violates the law. If he does more than read the name or names of the several candidates, and the offices which are to be voted for, over to a man that is educationally unable to read and point out to him the name or names of such as he desires to strike out, he violates the law, provided such voter has eyesight and the his arms and hands sufficient to enable him to strike out the names of such per-sons as he does not wish to vote for."

Judge Trumbull's Remedy.

The most notable of the various remedies proposed here, there, and everywhere for the evils with which it is said the existing social system is chargeable, is that which has for its originator on of the most distinguished men of his time. Hon. Lyman Trumbull, of Illinois, is the man. He was once a Justice of the Supreme Court of Illinois, but was elected to the national House of Representatives. Before taking his seat he was elected to the United States Senate. He was also a Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States. He began his political life as a Democrat, but afterwards became a Republican. He was one of Mr. Lincoln's steadfast friends and advisers. He refused to vote for the conviction of Andrew Johnson when Johnson was impeached by the House of Representatives, and thus cut himself off from the Republican party. He afterwards drifted back into the Democratic party. He has continued to drift until now we find him addressing a Populist meeting and preaching doctrines whose practical operation would be the uprooting of the whole social system of the country and the return of chaos. "The money power" is what Mr. Trumbull charges with having caused all the evils that afflict the body politic, "For ages," says he, "the money power has controlled legislation the world over, and has for many years exercised a controlling influence even in this country." As a means of checking the operations of this power, Mr. Trumbull would sweep away the foundations on which modern society rests. He would abolish the right to accumulate-that is, of course, indefinitely accumulate-and the right to inherit, or rather the right to dispose of property by will. He is quoted by the Washington Post as follows:

"Laws which open the door to large fortunes by devise, by inheritance, or by speculation, have no tendency to promote the happiness of the people at large, and often not even the happiness of those for whose benefit they are made. If the accumulation of vast fortunes goes on for another generation with the same accelerated rapidity. tion with the same accelerated as during the present, the wealth of this country will soon be consolidated in the hands of a few corporations and indi-viduals to as great an extent as the landed interests of Great Britain now are. The example of Mr. Whitney ought to be followed in Virginia as well as in New York. There are good reasons why every Democratic nominee for Congress in this State should be elected. No considerations merely personal to the voter should govern his conduct in this most important crisis. It was for the benefit of us of the South that the northern Democrats united with us in repealing all the Federal election laws, and thus lifted from our shoulders the strong arm of the Federal Government. If we fail to approve that repeal and send to Washington men on the other side of the question, the next House of Repre sentatives and Senate may be Republican and may proceed to bind us hand and foot as soon as they get the presidency once more, as they surely will do in 1896 if we fall to carry the congressional elections of 1894.

Do not deceive yourselves into the belief that we in Virginia have no personal interest in the New York elections of this year. Those elections are our If the voters of New York ratify the amendment to the State constitution which gerrymanders that State in the interest of the Republican party and places the control of the same to the hands of a minority of the voters, the Republicans will never hereafter allow that control to pass from their hands. As we have said heretofore, the people of the entire country will be governed by that same New York minority; for with New York to lead them the Republicans will have no difficulty in electing the next President of the United States and all future ones, We ber 23d.

Well it may, jocular friend, for ours is law-respecting people, and this is our first experience of this kind, The holding up of hands that we are now practicing is that which encourages and aids the officers of the law to hunt down these bandits so that examples may be made of them. It may be that our law will not permit us to hang them, if caught, but we can give them a term in our penttentiary which will be something of a warning to them and to all other highway robbers.

The Dispatch is of the opinion that these offenders will be caught; if they are in Virginia we are quite sure that they will be. Though our system of police is neither elaborate nor showy, it is wonderful how many "distinguished" criminals have fallen into the meshes of the law through Virginia agencies. We can recall the names of half a dozen famous, or infamous rascals, who, having long sluded the vigflance of the Pinkertons and other great detective forces. were at last caught by the efforts of Richmonders. Of such were the blgamist Marvin alias Merritt and the burglar Shaw. And if the Aquia-Creek train robbers have not escaped from the State we feel sure that they, too, will be captured. If they have gone beyond our borders we are not so certain of their being brought to justice.

The Old Dominion is greatly stirred by the Aquia-Creek affair. It roused us like a toesin of war, and, indeed, it had a smack of war in it, and it took place on ground where some of the earliest shots of the late war were fired. Governor O Ferrall caught the popular feeling instantly and without delay offered a reward of $1,00 for the apprehension of the robbers. So far as we can recall, this is the largest reward ever offered by a Virginia executive for the apprehension of fugitives from justice, but it is not too large; Virginia could well afford to pay ten times as much for the privilege of having the

By the way, the thoughtfulness of the telegraph operator at Tidewater in warning the railroad officials at Quantico of the approach of the "wild" engine, which the murderously-inclined rebbers had turned loose, cannot be too highly commended. Evidently he is a thinking man and a prompt acting one, too. The purpose of the bandits in setting the locomotive free, and at high speed, was that the robbed train should be disabled as long as possible, and all the more time given themselves to make good their escape. Little they cared who was hurt by the "wild" engine; all that they desired was to secure their own safety and carry off the plunder they had taken from the express-car. This act of theirs was an additional crime, and not less helious than the halting and robbing of the train.

In a recent issue you say truly, anent

I shall never forget the impression made upon me by the use made of this song upon me by the use make the carolina. Some years ago, when delivering a course of lectures to the teachers of that State of lectures to the teachers of that state at the university at Chapel Hill, the president of that institution, Dr. Battle, always opened the general exercises by calling for the singing of The Old North State by the whole audience, in full chorus, and all standing, as a sort of North Carolina dexology. It was always sung with a hearty good-will, everybody appearing to know the words and the air, and the wave of patriotic fervor that talways raised was an inspiring introair, and the wave of patriotic fervor that it always raised was an inspiring introduction for one who would lecture for the benefit of the noble people of the Old North State. I have often wished that Virsinia had such an inspiring State song, not only for use on public occasions, but to be specially "appointed to be sung by all the children in her public schools." WHAT WOMEN NEED.

There Are Innumerable Things That Contribute to Their Comfort, Their Happiness, and Their Health,

"Women are naturally weaker than men and more despondent. They suffer and require assistance. Far too often this is not appreciated, but it is never-theless necessary. Men are made to bat-tle with the world and with each other; tie with the world and with each other, women possess the gentler traits which entitle them to consideration and kindness. It stands to reason that when women do not feel well; when their strength seems all gone and they are despondent, often discouraged, they need, indeed must have, assistance. This assistance can beet by readered to the form of some have, assistance. This assistance can best be rendered in the form of some gentle stimulant which enables them to regain their strength, preserve their health, their beauty, and their attractiveness. At such times nothing can equal a medicinal whiskey, and Duffy's Fure Mait is the only preparation which has ever met this requirement. There are women who realize this truth fully, and follow carefully the path named. They realize their needs and always act upon such knowledge."

The above remarks were made by a bright and prominent lady in New York society, and she voiced the sentiment of society, and sae voiced the sentiment of hundreds of others who have passed through similar experiences. This great medicinal whiskey, which is the only one on the market that possesses the power named, can be procured of any reputable druggist or grocer. Do not be induced to take any other.

STANDARD DAIRY CHOP

is a properly balanced ration, composed of col-tonseed meal, linseed meal, mili feed, &c., mixed in such proportion as to insure the best results at the smallest cost. Price 90 cents per 100 pounds. WOODLAWN DAIRY, August 22, 1894.

Mesers Thomas S. Wun & Co.:

Gentlemen,—I have been feeding a herd of forty beed of dairy cattle on your Standard Dairy Chop, and find that it produces as much mik, and of as good quality, as feed costing mach more. I expect to use a large quantity during the winter months. Hoping you much success, because of the interest you take in the dairy people, I am

GLASSES AND GLASSES. How dear to my eyes are the scenes thro' these glasses.
That shine with a brightness akin to pure gold.
Whose frames sit so well on my proboscis. My eyesight so weakly, they make very I read and I write and I walk with them daily.

They suit me so well I could sleep with them, too:
Once I was sad, but now I am gaily,
For my eyes they have been made just as good as new.
Chorus:—The shining bright glasses, the golden-rimmed glasses,
The glasses that made my old eyes as good as new.

A time there was once, it was in my childhood.

childhood.
When achings my head almost daily would rack.
My poor, blurred sight would put me in no mild mood.
And the specks of the fakirs I was tempted to crack.
I'd look at the book till my nose touched the pages; the pages; I'd walk in the street, but naught could Then I'd cuss and say words never ut-ters' by sages,
'Til the air that surrounded me was very blue.
